ABSTRACT

This report provides a select chronology of congressional and presidential actions and documents related to major budget events in calendar year 1999, covering the FY2000 budget (October 1, 1999-September 30, 2000). While the paper copy provides numerous Internet addresses, congressional offices can also use the Internet version of this report to access active links to appropriations and budget legislation, budget and economic data tables, pie charts, glossaries, selected testimony, publications, the President's budget documents, and CRS products.

For additional information, see CRS Issue Brief IB10017, The Budget for Fiscal Year 2000, by Philip D. Winters; CRS Report 98-96, Budget Surpluses: Economic Effects of Debt Repayment, Tax Cuts, or Spending: An Overview, by William Cox; and CRS Report 98-721, Introduction to the Federal Budget Process, by Robert Keith. This chronology will be updated as needed.

Budget FY2000: A Chronology with Internet Access

Summary

This is a select chronology of, and a finding guide for information on, congressional and presidential actions and documents related to major budget events in calendar year 1999, covering the FY2000 budget (October 1, 1999 — September 30, 2000). Brief information is provided, as needed, on the President's budget, congressional budget resolutions, appropriations measures (regular, continuing, supplementals, and rescissions), budget reconciliation, House and Senate votes, publications, testimony, charts, and tables.

In using this online version, one can click on the highlighted (underlined) section and be connected to full-text CRS products, documents, publications, testimony, and data tables. Internet addresses [http://] are provided in the printed copy of this report, so that the reader can consult cited information.

Examples of Internet connections to full-text material found in this report include CRS products, when they become available, on the budget process, reconciliation, and each of the 13 appropriation bills, pie charts such as "The Federal Dollar — Where the Money Comes From and Where it Goes," Congressional Budget Office (CBO) publications including the Economic and Budget Outlook: Fiscal Years 2000-2009, and General Accounting Office (GAO) reports such as Federal Debt: Answers to Frequently Asked Questions.

Other Internet-linkages provide full access to budget, surplus/deficits, debt, economic data tables and charts, selected congressional testimony, and bills, reports, and public laws for FY1997-FY2000 appropriations legislation.

If Internet access is not available, addresses and phone numbers are listed for congressional committees, executive branch agencies mentioned in this report, and the sources of other publications.

Congressional offices using a printed copy of this CRS product can check the CRS Appropriations Page [<http://www.loc.gov/crs/products/apppage.html>] to check whether there is a later edition than December 1, 1999, of this report.

Congressional Documents

11/10/99 — CBO releases the Monthly Budget Review. “Fiscal year 1999 ended with a total surplus of about $123 billion—reflecting an off-budget surplus of $124 billion and an on-budget deficit of only $1 billion. It marked the seventh consecutive year of improvement in the government’s budget results since 1992, when the total deficit peaked at $290 billion (the result of an off-budget surplus of $50 billion and an on-budget deficit of $340 billion) ... The surplus in September was $56.4 billion, or $1.6 billion less than CBO had projected on the basis of the Daily Treasury Statements. Revenues were only slightly higher than anticipated, but outlays were $2 billion more than CBO had expected. A $1.4 billion adjustment in the credit subsidies recorded for auctions of licenses to use the electromagnetic spectrum accounted for much of the difference in outlays.”

10/12/99 — Monthly Budget Review statement on fiscal year 1999 budget surplus released by Congressional Budget Office (CBO). “CBO estimates that the budget surplus in September was about $58 billion, producing a total surplus for fiscal year 1999 of nearly $125 billion. That result is more than $55 billion above last year’s surplus and about $5 billion more than CBO projected in July. Excluding the surplus of the off-budget Social Security trust funds (about $125 billion) and net outlays of the Postal Service (about $1 billion, also off-budget), CBO estimates that the government's on-budget accounts showed a surplus of $1 billion for 1999."

05/07/99 — Monthly Budget Review statement on FY1999 budget surplus released by Congressional Budget Office (CBO). “Fiscal year 1999 revenues through April are very close to CBO's expectations, and outlays for a number of programs are slightly lower than anticipated. In particular, spending for Medicare remains below last year's level. CBO is not revising its projection of the 1999 surplus ($111 billion) at this time. But if current trends continue, it is unlikely to lower that estimate and may increase the estimate slightly when it issues a new forecast on July 1."

04/29/99 — Maintaining Budgetary Discipline: Spending and Revenue Options released by the Congressional Budget Office (CBO). "This volume compiles 250 specific policy options for reducing federal spending or increasing revenues in a wide variety of programs. Prepared at the request of the House and Senate Budget Committees, it is intended to help policymakers maintain budgetary discipline and accomplish related policy goals. The report is similar to the compendiums of policy options for reducing the deficit that the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) prepared from 1980 to 1997."

04/16/99 — Budget Issues: Budgetary Implications of Selected GAO Work for Fiscal Year 2000 (OCG-99-26) released by General Accounting Office (GAO). "This report identifies in a single document the budgetary implications of selected program reforms discussed in our work but not yet implemented or enacted. This report is part of a special biennial series designed to help each new Congress identify options that could be used to reduce federal spending or increase revenues. Where available, budgetary savings estimates provided by the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) or the Joint Committee on Taxation (JCT) are presented for each of the options. This report contains over 100 options."

— An Analysis of the President's Budgetary Proposals for Fiscal Year 2000 released by the Congressional Budget Office (CBO). "CBO estimates that the Administration's budget—including both the basic policies and the Social Security framework—would reduce projected surpluses by $53 billion in 2000 and a total of $436 billion through 2004 ... Under its basic policies, the Administration would increase discretionary spending above the levels allowed by the current statutory caps on such spending. It would pay for that increase by raising revenues and cutting mandatory spending. CBO estimates, however, that the increase in discretionary spending would be only partly offset by the higher revenues and lower mandatory spending. In 2000, the basic policies would reduce the surplus by $20 billion compared with CBO's current-policy projections ... Over the 2000-2004 period, the Administration's basic policies would reduce the projected surpluses by a cumulative total of $73 billion."

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan before the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs. "The impressive performance of the private sector was reflected in a continued improvement in the federal budget. Burgeoning receipts, along with continuing restraint on federal spending, produced the first unified budget surplus in thirty years, allowing the Treasury to begin to pay down the federal debt held by the public.”

01/29/99 — CBO releases the Economic and Budget Outlook: Fiscal Years 2000-2009. “Total federal revenues exceeded spending in fiscal year 1998 by $70 billion, producing the first surplus in almost 30 years. The Congressional Budget Office (CBO) estimates that under current law, the total budget surplus will reach $107 billion in 1999 and $131 billion in 2000 ... When the off-budget spending and revenues of Social Security and the Postal Service are excluded, however, the remaining on-budget transactions show a deficit in those years—$19 billion in 1999 and $7 billion in 2000. But CBO projects that those on-budget deficits will give way to on-budget surpluses in 2001 and succeeding years as the total budget surplus climbs to $381 billion in 2009.”

01/27/99 — CBO releases Sequestration Preview Report for Fiscal Year 2000.

“The Congressional Budget Office (CBO) estimates that the statutory limits on discretionary spending detailed in this sequestration report would require the Congress and the President to enact lower levels of discretionary spending for fiscal year 2000 than they did for 1999. However, they could increase mandatory spending or reduce revenues by nearly $3 billion in 2000 without triggering a pay-as-you-go sequestration ... The Office of Management and Budget (OMB) estimates whether a sequestration is required to eliminate a breach of the discretionary spending caps. CBO’s estimates are merely advisory.”
