U.S. Arms Sales: Agreements with and Deliveries to Major Clients, 1997-2004

Summary

This report provides background data on United States arms sales agreements with and deliveries to its major purchasers during calendar years 1997-2004. In a series of data tables, it lists the total dollar values of U.S. arms sales agreements with its top five purchasers in five specific regions of the world for three specific periods: 1997-2000, 2001-2004, and 2004 alone, and the total dollar values of U.S. arms deliveries to its top five purchasers in those same regions for the periods 1997-2000, 2001-2004, and for 2004 alone. In addition, the report provides data tables listing the total dollar values of U.S. arms agreements with and deliveries to its top 10 purchasers worldwide for the periods 1997-2000, 2001-2004, and for 2004 alone.

This report is prepared in conjunction with the annual CRS report for Congress entitled: Conventional Arms Transfers to Developing Nations, 1997-2004 (CRS Report RL33051), by Richard Grimmett. That report details both U.S. and foreign arms transfer activities globally, and provides analysis of arms trade trends. The intent here is to complement that elaborate worldwide treatment of the international arms trade by providing only the dollar values of United States arms sales agreements with and delivery values to its leading customers, by geographic region, for the calendar years 1997-2000, 2001-2004, and 2004. Unlike CRS Report RL33051, this report focuses exclusively on U.S. arms sales, provides the specific names of the major U.S. arms customers, by region, together with the total dollar values of their arms purchases or deliveries. This report will not be updated.

U.S. Arms Sales: Agreements with and Deliveries to Major Clients, 1997-2004

This report provides background data on United States arms sales agreements with and deliveries to its major purchasers during calendar years 1997-2004. It provides the total dollar values of U.S. arms agreements with its top five purchasers in five specific regions of the world for the periods 1997-2000, 2001-2004, and for 2004, and the total dollar values of U.S. arms deliveries to its top five purchasers in five specific regions for those same years. In addition, the report provides a listing of the total dollar values of U.S. arms agreements with and deliveries to its top ten purchasers for the periods 1997-2000, 2001-2004, and for 2004. The data are official, unclassified, United States Defense Department figures compiled by the Defense Security Cooperation Agency (DSCA), unless otherwise indicated. The data have been restructured for this report by DSCA from a fiscal year format to a calendar year format. Thus a year in this report covers the period from January 1-December 31, and not the fiscal year period from October 1-September 30.¹

U.S. Agreements with Leading Purchasers, 1997-2004

The following five regional tables provide the total dollar values of all U.S. defense articles and defense services sold to the top five purchasers in each region indicated for the calendar year(s) noted. These values represent the total value of all government-to-government agreements actually concluded between the United States and the foreign purchaser under the Foreign Military Sales (FMS) program during the calendar year(s) indicated.² In a separate table, the total dollar values of all U.S. defense articles and defense services sold to the top ten purchasers worldwide is provided for calendar year period noted. All totals are expressed as current U.S. dollars.

² Current U.S. law and regulations do not require U.S. companies to provide, routinely and systematically, data on arms sales agreements actually concluded with foreign purchasers resulting from commercial licenses authorized by the U.S. State Department. Thus, with one very notable exception relating to the United Arab Emirates (U.A.E.) in 2000, the agreement data in the following tables do not include the values of U.S. licensed commercial sales.

The following five regional tables provide the total dollar values of all U.S. defense articles and defense services delivered to the top five purchasers in each region indicated for the calendar year(s) noted for all deliveries under the U.S. Foreign Military Sales (FMS) program. These values represent the total value of all government-to-government deliveries actually concluded between the United States and the foreign purchaser under the FMS program during the calendar year(s) indicated. Also included in these U.S. delivery totals are the total values of all commercially licensed deliveries of defense articles and services actually made during the fiscal year(s) noted.³

In a separate table (below), the total dollar values of all U.S. defense articles and defense services actually delivered to the top ten purchasers worldwide is provided. The delivery totals combine FMS deliveries concluded for the calendar year(s) noted, and commercially licensed deliveries concluded for the pertinent fiscal year(s).

³ Current U.S. law and regulations require U.S. companies to provide detailed data to the U.S. government on deliveries actually made to foreign purchasers based on licensed commercial export authorizations previously given by the U.S. State Department. The following delivery tables add the values of all commercially licensed deliveries of defense articles and defense services actually made to the values of all Foreign Military Sales (FMS) deliveries actually made. The U.S. FMS delivery data are for the calendar year(s) noted, the commercially licensed delivery values included are for the pertinent fiscal years. Commercial licensed delivery data are not currently available on a calendar year basis.
