Summary

Since the enactment of the Commemorative Works Act (CWA) in 1986, Congress has authorized 48 commemorative works to be placed in the District of Columbia or its environs. Twenty-two of these works have been completed and dedicated.

This report contains a catalog of the authorized works that have been completed and dedicated since 1986. For each completed memorial, the report provides a brief summary of its authorization and a description of the memorial. A picture of each work is also included. The Appendix includes a map showing each completed memorial's location.

Introduction

Since November 1986, the Commemorative Works Act (CWA) has provided the legal framework for the placement of commemorative works in the District of Columbia. The CWA was enacted to establish a statutory process for ensuring “that future commemorative works in areas administered by the National Park Service (NPS) and the General Services Administration (GSA) in the District of Columbia and its environs (1) are appropriately designed, constructed, and located and (2) reflect a consensus of the lasting significance of the subjects involved.”¹ Since the CWA’s enactment, 48 memorials have been authorized for placement in the District of Columbia.

This report provides a catalog of the memorials in the District of Columbia that have been authorized, completed, and dedicated since the passage of the CWA. A summary of the work is provided. The report also provides information—located within text boxes for easy reference—on the statute(s) authorizing the work; the authorized organization; legislative extensions, if any; the memorial’s location; and the dedication date. A picture of each work is also included. The Appendix includes a map showing each memorial’s location.

For a further discussion of the placement of memorials in the District of Columbia see CRS Report R41658, Commemorative Works in the District of Columbia: Background and Practice, by Jacob R. Straus and CRS Report R43744, Monuments and Memorials Authorized Under the Commemorative Works Act in the District of Columbia: Current Development of In Progress and Lapsed Works, by Jacob R. Straus.

Commemorative Works Areas of the District of Columbia

The CWA divides land under the jurisdiction of the NPS and GSA in the District of Columbia and its environs into three sections for the placement of memorials: the Reserve, Area I, and Area II. For each area, the standards for memorial placement are specified in law, and congressional approval of monument location is required. Property not under the jurisdiction of the NPS or GSA is not subject to the CWA. See Figure A-1 for a map of the commemorative works areas of the District of Columbia.

Reserve

The Reserve was created in November 2003, by P.L. 108-126, to prohibit the addition of future memorials in an area defined as “the great cross-axis of the Mall, which generally extends from the United States Capitol to the Lincoln Memorial, and from the White House to the Jefferson Memorial.”² This area is legally considered “a substantially completed work of civic art.”³ Within this area, “to preserve the integrity of the Mall ... the siting of new commemorative works is prohibited.”⁴

² 40 U.S.C. §8902.

³ P.L. 108-126, §202(a), 117 Stat. 1348 (2003).

⁴ 40 U.S.C. §8901 note; and 40 U.S.C. §8908(c). The placement of museums and visitors centers is also prohibited under 40 U.S.C. §8905(b)(5) and 40 U.S.C. §8908(c).

Area I

Created as part of the original CWA statute in 1986, Area I is reserved for commemorative works of “preeminent historical and lasting significance to the United States.”⁵ Area I is roughly bounded by the West Front of the Capitol; Pennsylvania Avenue NW (between 1st and 15th Streets NW); Lafayette Square; 17th Street NW (between H Street and Constitution Avenue); Constitution Avenue NW (between 17th and 23rd Streets); the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts waterfront area; Theodore Roosevelt Island; National Park Service land in Virginia surrounding the George Washington Memorial Parkway; the 14th Street Bridge area; and Maryland Avenue SW, from Maine Avenue SW, to Independence Avenue SW, at the United States Botanic Garden.

Area II

Also created as part of the original CWA statute, Area II is reserved for “subjects of lasting historical significance to the American people.”⁶ Area II encompasses all sections of the District of Columbia and its environs not part of the Reserve or Area I.

Authorized Commemorative Works

Since the passage of the Commemorative Works Act (CWA) in 1986, Congress has authorized 48 commemorative works to be placed in the District of Columbia or its environs, 22 of which have been completed and dedicated. The other 26 authorized commemorative works either are in progress, have a lapsed authorization, or have had their authorization repealed. Table 1 lists the commemorative works authorized and dedicated since 1986.

The Secretary or the Administrator notifies Congress by sending a letter to the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate. Notes:

- a. The United States Air Force Memorial was constructed on land not governed by the Commemorative Works Act. For more information, see the section below on the “United States Air Force” Memorial and the Air Force Memorial Foundation, <http://www.airforcememorial.org>.
- b. In authorizing the plaque to honor other Vietnam veterans who died as a result of service in the Vietnam War, Congress specifically exempted the American Battle Monuments Commission from 40 U.S.C. §8903(c), which prohibits the creation of a commemorative work to an event, individuals, or groups “until the 25th anniversary of the event, death of the individual, or death of the last surviving member of the group.”

Completed Commemorative Works

Since 1986, 22 commemorative works have been completed within the District of Columbia and its environs. These memorials honored groups of individuals, such as women who have served in the U.S. military; veterans from World War II as well as the Korean War; and individuals including George Mason, Francis Scott Key, and Mahatma Gandhi. For each memorial, a short background and a picture is included. Additionally, a text box is provided that includes information on the authorizing statute; the sponsor organization; statutory extensions of the sponsor’s authorization, if necessary;⁷ the memorial’s location; and the date of dedication.

⁷ Pursuant to the Commemorative Works Act (40 U.S.C. §8903(e)(1)), all sponsor groups are provided with a seven-year period to complete (i.e., dedicate) the memorial. This time period can be extended administratively if the Secretary of the Interior or the Administrator of General Services issues a construction permit, or if Congress amends the initial statute to provide for additional time to complete the memorial’s design and construction. For more information, see (continued...)

Women in Military Service for America

In October 1986, Congress authorized the Women in Military Service for America Memorial Foundation to construct a commemorative work, on federal land, to honor women who had served in the U.S. Armed Forces.⁸ Located at the ceremonial entrance to Arlington National Cemetery, the Women in Military Service for America Memorial is a “30-foot high curved neoclassical retaining wall”⁹ and a fountain. While the foundation raised nonfederal funds to construct the memorial, because the memorial was built to complement the existing main gate and plaza of Arlington National Cemetery, Congress authorized the Secretary of the Army to provide “engineering, design, construction management, and related services on a reimbursable basis.”¹⁰

In 2019, the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2020 transferred jurisdiction over the Women in Military Service for America memorial from the National Park Service to the Department of the Army,¹¹ which manages Arlington National Cemetery.¹² Figure 1 shows the Women in Military Service for America Memorial.

Francis Scott Key

In October 1986, the Francis Scott Key Park Foundation was authorized by Congress to construct a commemorative work on public grounds in the District of Columbia to “honor and in commemoration of Francis Scott Key, the author of the words to ‘The Star Spangled Banner,’ our National Anthem, who lived and practiced law in Washington, District of Columbia at the time he penned those immortal words.”¹³ The memorial is located in a park close to the site of Francis Scott Key’s home, which was demolished in 1947,¹⁴ and is adjacent to the Georgetown entrance to Key Bridge, which is also named for Francis Scott Key. The memorial consists of a round stone base and a bust of Francis Scott Key and is shown in Figure 2.

Korean War Veterans

In October 1986, the American Battle Monuments Commission¹⁵ was authorized by Congress to construct a memorial on federal land in Washington, DC, “to honor members of the Armed Forces of the United States who served in the Korean War, particularly those who were killed in action, are still listed as missing in action, or were held as prisoners of war.”¹⁶ Located to the southeast of the Lincoln Memorial, the Korean War Veterans Memorial contains 19 stainless steel statues, a mural wall etched with bas-relief images of photographs of Korean War scenes from the National Archives, a pool of remembrance, an honor roll, a low stone wall listing the 22 nations that

During its relatively short duration from June 25, 1950 to July 27, 1953, 54,246 Americans died in support of their country. Of these, 8,200 are listed as missing in action or lost or buried at sea. In addition 103,284 were wounded during the conflict.”¹⁸ Figure 3 shows the Korean War Veterans Memorial.

²⁰ Because the Korean War Veterans Memorial was initially authorized in 1986, prior to the creation of the Reserve, Congress authorized the memorial’s placement in Area I pursuant to P.L. 100-267, 102 Stat. 41 (1988).

American Armored Force

In November 1986, Congress authorized 25 private armored force committees and associations to create a memorial on federal land to “honor members of the American Armored Force who have served in armored units.”²¹ The memorial was authorized to “commemorate the exceptional professionalism of the members of the American Armored Force and their efforts to maintain peace worldwide.”²² Located on Memorial Drive at the entrance to Arlington National Cemetery,²³ the American Armored Force Memorial (Figure 4) depicts armored forces engaged in battle surrounded by the logos of the various armored divisions.

Vietnam Women

In November 1988, Congress authorized the Vietnam Women’s Memorial Project to establish a memorial on federal land in the District of Columbia to “honor women who served in the Armed Forces of the United States in the Republic of Vietnam during the Vietnam era.”²⁴ Located next to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, the Vietnam Women’s Memorial is designed to honor all women who served during the Vietnam War. The bronze statue of the Vietnam Women’s Memorial statue (Figure 5) depicts “a nurse—in a moment of crisis—... supported by sandbags as she serves as the life support for a wounded soldier lying across her lap. The standing woman looks up, in search of a med-i-vac helicopter or, perhaps, in search of help from God.”²⁵

George Mason

In August 1990, the Board of Regents of Gunston Hall²⁷ was authorized to build a memorial to George Mason on federal land in the District of Columbia.²⁸ Located in West Potomac Park, near the Tidal Basin, Jefferson Memorial, and George Mason Memorial Bridge,²⁹ the George Mason Memorial (Figure 6) was designed in the style of Mason’s Gunston Hall plantation and features a statue of the American patriot and statesmen seated on a bench.³⁰ Following congressional authorization of the site location,³¹ the memorial was placed as an addition to an existing commemorative work to George Mason—the south-bound span of the 14th Street Bridge—that had been authorized in 1959.³²

African-American Civil War-Union Soldier/Sailors

In October 1992, Congress authorized the government of the District of Columbia to establish a memorial on federal land "to honor African-Americans who served with Union forces during the Civil War."³⁴ Located at 12th and U Streets NW the African-American Civil War-Union Soldiers/Sailors Memorial (Figure 7) features a granite plaza surrounded by a wall of honor on three sides. In the center is a statue featuring "uniformed black soldiers and a sailor poised to leave home. Women, children, and elders on the cusp of the concave inner surface seek strength together."³⁵
